A great honor was conferred on the oung girl in 1885, when, at the mem-nial meeting for General Grant, in Treasont Temple, she was invited to rite the ode for that impressive occasion. Her poetic gift is in the heroic vein; She is an excellent Latin scholar. She is now in London, engaged in literary work. Miss Guiney is of medium height, slender and supple, with flowing hair, dark eyes and pale, clear complexion—a face full of laughing animation and seldom caught in repose. She is a famous destrienne, making nothing of a ten mile walk, and has an insocciant grace that is instantly captivating.
